Oscar de la Renta

IT WASN'T EASY convincing the world that America deserved a place in high fashion. But over the course of his glittering 50-year career, Oscar de la Renta persuaded the European titans of couture — Paris, Milan, and London — to take American fashion seriously.

The legendary designer and fashion magnate was known for moving effortlessly between the parallel worlds of high fashion and high society, even as he championed the democratization of fashion via ready-made clothing.

The red carpet is still perennially studded with stars in de la Renta gowns, and he is often credited with bringing high fashion to the White House. His formidable fashion empire was also punctuated by his philanthropy and patronage of the arts.

When de la Renta died on October 20, 2014, due to complications from cancer, he left behind an impressive legacy, having firmly established New York City — and America at large — as a place where high fashion could feel right at home.

The Oscar de la Renta Forever® stamps highlight 10 stunning details from some of his most striking gowns as well as a black-and-white portrait of the man himself. Art Director Derry Noyes was eager to take on the challenge of designing these stamps. She says she had a vision for them right away, even though, she adds, “I’m not very fashionable myself. I'm in blue jeans most of the time."

As she began sifting through the ample creative material from the designer's work and life, she was struck by the fabrics that de la Renta used. "So that's when I started zeroing in on the details," Noyes says. She worked directly with the fashion house to define the artistic approach for the stamps.

The resulting 10 stamps showcase the artistry of de la Renta's work in miniature. The magnified patterns and textures from lifesize dresses catch the eye, even when the images are merely an inch in height.

When choosing the patterns, Noyes — like the designer himself — focused on fabrics and textures. "If you were to ask Oscar how he started his design process, he would tell you that it always started with fabric," says Alex Bolen, CEO of Oscar de la Renta. "He did not begin with an idea in mind of a dress."

*"Oscar wanted to promote a sense of joy
in everything he did."*

— Alex Bolen, CEO, Oscar de la Renta

De la Renta's choice of material that delights the senses — the pleasing gradation of color, the feeling of silk between one's fingers, the satisfying sound of swishing taffeta — is reflected in the stamps themselves.

A horizontal portrait of the designer, along with his iconic and memorable signature, is also featured in the stamp booklet. "It captures Oscar's spirit, despite the fact that it is a black-and-white photo," Bolen says. "Oscar was in no way, shape, or form black and white; he was technicolor all day long."

Oscar de la Renta was born on July 22, 1932, in the Dominican Republic. He studied and worked in Madrid and Paris before coming to New York City in 1963. Just a few years later, he launched his own line to generous acclaim, and the de la Renta name soon stood for sophistication and glamour in a way that appealed to both elites and everyday women.

His reputation acquired newfound prestige when First Lady Nancy Reagan began wearing his designs in the 1980s. Over the next 20 years, de la Renta made it a personal mission to bring style to the White House. He designed extensively for Hillary Clinton and Laura Bush, and Michelle Obama wore a de la Renta dress just a few days before his death.

Oscar de la Renta's long career built the reputation of American style even as he personally embodied the American dream. "The lesson of Oscar de la Renta's life is that it's true: The American dream can be achieved," Bolen says. "Come here, have a great idea, work hard, and you can make it happen."

De la Renta's ambition flourished in the United States, where he crafted clothes that were at once timeless and modern, transcending fussy tradition and yet surprising the eye with forward-looking details. Ultimately, the clothing he created mirrored the elusive duality of an American woman: at once both feminine and strong, powerful and yet refined. ●

A Man of Great Dreams

The legacy of our 35th president,
John Fitzgerald
Kennedy

JOHN F. KENNEDY'S IRISH-CATHOLIC PARENTS imparted to each of their nine children a fiercely competitive and inquisitive spirit, along with the expectation of achieving great things.

As the second son of this prominent Boston family, Kennedy became the youngest-ever U.S. president in 1961 after defeating Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon in a close election.

Kennedy's campaign evoked youthful vitality, and in his Inaugural Address, he proclaimed that the torch was being passed to a new generation to defend human rights and secure freedom around the world. He followed that up with the launching of the Peace Corps that same year.

During the height of the Cold War, Kennedy confronted the Soviet Union in a series of conflicts that could have escalated into a major war. On the domestic front, he submitted a bill to end racial segregation that would pass after his death.

Kennedy's violent and tragic death in November 1963 left the nation grief stricken — yet many of his dreams live on.

Love Skywriting

Skywriting is a dramatic way to make a statement, and this stamp celebrates romantic — and very public — displays of affection. The issuance is a continuation of the popular Love series.

Love Skywriting Notecard Set

John C. Savage, an English aviator, is credited with the development of skywriting, inspired perhaps by World War I planes used to send messages to far-flung troops via smoke signals. The message art form was introduced to the British and American public in 1922. Advertisers still use skywriting occasionally, but the messages people remember most are the romantic ones: a marriage proposal, an apology, or an affirmation of love. Why not infuse affection into some of your correspondence this season with this set of 10 cards, 10 envelopes, 10 decorative seals, and 10 Love Skywriting Forever® stamps?

Love Is in the Air

Communicating on a grand scale with the rare and difficult art of skywriting

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE, you don't care if the whole world knows it. By using letters about a mile tall that can be read from the ground for up to 30 miles in any direction, there's hardly a grander form your feelings might take than skywriting.

Skywriting developed in the 1920s and became a sought-after advertising technique in the decades that followed. Although its popularity has waned — there are no cloudy skies, for instance, in television — skywriting continues to be a lofty way for lovestruck individuals to make a memorable declaration.

The new Love Forever® stamp from the U.S. Postal Service® commemorates this tradition of scrawling love letters among the clouds. The word “Love” is gracefully written between soft clouds, and a white plane (a fanciful rendering of skywriting planes) finishes the word with a playful flourish. Although real-life skywriting cannot make connections between letters, this depiction celebrates the challenge of putting language in the sky.

Stamp designer Louise Fili approached the assignment with a wink and a nod to her extensive background in expressive typography. “I’m always trying to find new ways of portraying type,” she says. “When I was doing book jackets, it was kind of a joke that I’d used every gimmick except skywriting. I never really thought I’d have an opportunity to use it.”

Working alongside illustrator Jessica Hische and collaborating with Art Director Derry Noyes, Fili says the design came together smoothly — after the initial plane had to be redrawn.

In this season of love, this stamp captures both the playfulness and the grandeur of romance. “I just wanted something a little whimsical that had that airy and lighthearted feeling,” Fili says. And when it comes to expressing airiness and lightheartedness, skywriting is hard to top.

474304 / PANE OF 20 WITH PLATE NO.
& HEADER* / $9.80

BORN IN RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, in 1912, Dorothy Height moved northward with her family to Pennsylvania as part of the Great Migration of African Americans. There, early experiences emboldened her to stand up against racism, wherever she encountered it.

Height later received a college scholarship as an oratorical prize for a speech focused on the Reconstruction Amendments to the U.S. Constitution. Barnard College accepted her but eventually revoked her admission when an administrator claimed that the school's quota of two black students had already been met.

Height enrolled at New York University instead, where she earned a bachelor's degree in 1933 and a master's degree in educational psychology in 1935. By then, Height had begun a career in public service and would go on to serve for four decades with the YWCA.

Height remained committed to social justice and civil rights throughout her professional career — whether testifying about the inhumane treatment of domestic workers in New York City; aiding African-American women in finding housing in segregated Washington, D.C., when they came to help in the 1940s war effort; or registering voters and recruiting Southern women into the civil rights movement.

She also helped organize the 1963 March on Washington, where she shared the stage with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., as he gave his "I have a dream" speech. Her relationship with Dr. King remained pivotal. When a church bombing in Birmingham, Alabama, killed four black girls in September 1963, King asked Height to meet with the city's grieving families.

In addition to numerous honorary degrees, Height received the nation's two highest civilian honors: the Presidential Medal of Freedom (awarded by President Bill Clinton in 1994) and the Congressional Gold Medal (awarded by President George W. Bush in 2009).

Height died on April 20, 2010, at age 98. After her death, a U.S. Postal Service® facility in northeast Washington, D.C., was renamed the Dorothy I. Height Post Office — offering permanent tribute to her legacy.

Practical Tips for Making Beautiful Mail

Start a Note of Celebration

IN OUR DIGITAL AGE, a handwritten note is a meaningful way to let someone know you care. The physical presence of the letter itself, paired with the uniqueness of your handwriting, makes a paper note that much more treasured than a text message. Celebrate someone special in your life by sending a card or letter with these engaging stamps and products from our catalog.

Starting your note is often the hardest part of the process. Here are some writing prompts to get you on your way:

- Don't forget Mother's Day, May 14. Send your mom or a hard-working mother in your life a note using our Vintage Rose and Tulip notecards to let her know you notice her sacrifices and devotion. Open the letter with a cherished memory: Do you remember when I fell off the swingset at the park and you stopped my nosebleed with your socks?
- Congratulate a recently engaged or married couple using our Love Skywriting notecards. Start by commenting on why you think they're a perfect fit: Your shared love of classic movies bodes well for a long and happy marriage.
- Applaud someone's new job using the Gifts of Friendship notecards. Begin by sharing how you envision their future success: I imagine it will only be a matter of time until you're running that department with your characteristic panache.
- Celebrate the arrival of a new baby by sending a note to the happy (and very sleepy) parents. Pair the card with our Quilled Paper Heart stamp and open with a note of reassurance: You've got this: That beautiful baby is so fortunate to have such a competent set of parents to raise her.
- Apropos of nothing, send someone you love a postcard, using our newly issued, postcard-ready Seashells stamp. Keep it sweet and simple, with a few lines about why he or she brings you joy: Your musical laugh can fill an entire room with delight.

Duck Stamps

More than keepsakes for stamp collectors and outdoor enthusiasts, Federal Duck Stamps add up to a big investment in conservation. Nearly all of the proceeds of these stamps, issued by the U.S. Department of the Interior, help protect bird and wildlife habitats. Also serving as hunting licenses for waterfowl hunters, duck stamps feature artwork selected annually through a juried art contest open to the public.
